Women Voters Study Conditions During The Closing Session

Tenth Regional Conference of New York League of Women Voters Closed at Hotel Stuyvesant With Address on Pertinent Topics.

The luncheon and closing session of the Tenth Regional Conference of the New York League of Women Voters was held at the Hotel Stuyvesant on Friday afternoon.

The first feature of the afternoon's session following the excellent luncheon served the ladies by Manager Hillson, was the presentation of an exceedingly clever and humorous skit entitled, "How League Husbands Make the Program," which was presented by Mrs. William Warren Smith, Mrs. Elmore Duffy, Mrs. W. A. Saltford, Mrs. Charles De Yor, Mrs. F. B. Hemiway, Mrs. Zachow and Mrs. A. L. Peckham, all of the Poughkeepsie League of Women Voters. Appearing in men's coats and hats, and even assuming the long black "seegar," the performance picturing the men's meeting finally interrupted by the advent of two wives who were members of the L. W. V. was screamingly clever and funny and offered that touch of humor necessary to balance the seriousness of the rest of the day's program.

Mrs. William E. Thorpe, Jr., of Catskill, the Regional Director, in opening the afternoon's program, said that it was the first regional conference ever held in this region and expressed the hope that other such conferences would be held at least once or twice a year at different points in the region in the future. She called attention to the fact that there was no league in Ulster county which was very regrettable. There are some members of the state league in the county, but Mrs. Thorpe was very anxious that an organization be formed in Ulster county and asked the present members to use their good offices to try and form a full league here.

Mrs. Thorpe further stated that an invitation had been received from the Columbia county delegation to hold the next regional conference in their county, and the invitation would gladly be accepted, the exact place and time of such conference to be announced later.

The first speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. Henry Goddard Leach, chairman of the committee on efficiency in government of the N. Y. L. W. V., who spoke on "Efficiency in Government." Mrs. Leach said that she had just come from the northern part of the state where she had been spending the last six weeks. During her vacation she had had an opportunity to discover the importance of such organizations as the League of Women Voters in the smaller and more out of the way villages. The place where she was, having about 800 inhabitants throughout the year, found its population greatly increased during the summer. The summer population found themselves obliged to use some six miles of the most terrible washboard road that racked their autos frightfully. Finally these residents went to the town "fathers" to find out what could be done about it. They were told that there was no money for such a piece of work, and then they all attended a town meeting at which "the dough" was to be handed out. What was their amazement to find that there was money for everything but the road and the road commissioner could not remember what had been done with the money that was to go for that special piece of work. Finally a public accountant was called in to go over the books of the road commissioner in the hope of straightening out the matter and possibly finding a way for the needed construction on that six miles of roadway. Mrs. Leach was of the opinion that a League of Women Voters might have helped out in the matter or at least in the interpretation of the the rules and regulations of the road commission.

Local town and county government, Mrs. Leach found not to be operating efficiently while state and Federal governments function.

She spoke at some length on the crying need of reform of county government, in which no one seems to be interested unless such organizations as the league or its individual members made them so. That fact had been proven as well as many things already accomplished by the league. Mrs. Leach told of the tremendous saving of the Public Health Units in the county, over the old scattered efforts along public health lines. She thought it was a great mistake that the women had not been considered the economists and the men the creative factors, for the women run the homes where economics are most extensively practiced.

In closing Mrs. Leach told of the impressions of a noted English teacher of London, who has been her guest this summer, regarding present conditions of efficient government in America today. Whether we realize it or not, this English woman said that England and the world was taking a passionate interest in our NRA program and our great cooperative industrial system, all of which are forming such a great experiment. The speaker said that the L. W. V. had always believed in the present principles of the NRA, in good government and good industrial organization which it was to be hoped would continue.

The last speaker of the day and one who was very interesting and informing in a most delightful way, was Miss Louise K. Fast, secretary of International Cooperation to Pre-

Daylight Saving To End Sept. 24

Daylight saving time which has been in effect since the last Sunday in April will end at 2 o'clock Sunday morning, September 24, the last Sunday of the month, under the provisions of the daylight saving ordinance adopted by the common council on March 22, 1931.

Daylight saving time has been in effect in Kingston for the past twelve years, and although at various times efforts have been made to have the common council rescind the ordinance they have proved futile, and indications are that next year Kingston will again automatically adopt daylight saving time under the provisions of the ordinance.

McGinnies Attacks Democratic Program

Schenectady, N. Y., Sept. 9 (AP).—Speaker Joseph A. McGinnies of the New York State Assembly today said in an address prepared for delivery at the state convention of young men's Republican clubs that the Democratic program of local government reform "is so ridiculous that I marvel that their leaders dare to raise the issue."

"The Democratic party in New York city has brought the wealthiest city in the world to the verge of bankruptcy," he said. "Their mismanagement, incompetency and stupidity is notorious the world over.

"The government of New York city is a perfect maze of inefficiency and incompetency. If there ever was an antiquated, outworn and topsy turvy system of government it is right there. If it is the purpose of the Democratic party to re-organize county government I suggest that it start at home. * * * Until it does so any talk of reorganizing and reforming the up-state counties will result in nothing more than a ripple of laughter."

The local government issue was brought up by the Democrats at a recent state-wide meeting at Elmira as the basis for their fall campaign for control of the State Assembly.

James M. Sweeney Was on Rampage

Police Department Called Out Twice for His Activities Friday Night and He Was Arrested on Public Intoxication Charge—Arrested Today on Abandonment Charge.

James M. Sweeney, 29, of 64 Spruce street, drank a little too much strong waters Friday night and his activities were such that the police department was called out twice. The first call was from Abeel street where it was reported he had beaten a colored woman named Williams. That was at 9:30 o'clock.

Again at 11:45 o'clock the police received a call that in the vicinity of Hone and Hunter streets Sweeney was hurling flower pots off front porches and kicking in the doors. This time the police arrested him on a charge of public intoxication.

It was expected that the colored woman would appear today to press an assault charge against Sweeney but she had not appeared up to the time he was arraigned before Judge Culloton in police court on a charge of public intoxication when he was fined $5 or five days in jail. He took the five days.

After being sentenced he was again placed under arrest by the police on a warrant issued in Queens county, Long Island, where he is wanted on a charge of abandoning his children and leaving them in destitute circumstances.

After serving his five days' jail sentence here he will be turned over to the Queens county authorities and taken there for arraignment on the abondonment charge.

Maine Will Vote Monday on Repeal

(By The Associated Press)

Maine, the cradle of prohibition, the state which went officially "bone dry" away back in 1851, votes Monday on the proposal to repeal the 18th Amendment.

Both prohibitionists and repealists were insisting today that the majority sentiment of the state was on their side.

Maine is the 26th state to ballot on the repeal question. All of the previous 25 have voted to wipe out national prohibition. A total of 36 is necessary before prohibition is repealed.

On Tuesday three other states—Maryland, Minnesota and Colorado—will register their will on the question. By November 7 at least 39 states will have voted.

Receipts for fiscal year to date (since July 1) $414,954,913.65; expenditures $660,679,612.11 (including $236,165,561.83 emergency expenditures); excess of expenditures $245,724,698.46.

Patrolman Keresman Named Secretary

Patrolman Peter Keresman of the Kingston police department Friday was appointed secretary of the State Police Conference to succeed the late Joseph J. O'Reilly of New York city, who held the post for eight years previous to his death recently.

The position, an honorary one with no salary attached, is one of much responsibility, it having to do with the activities of 77 police organizations that are in the conference, representing 32,000 patrolmen from the cities, towns and villages of the state.

Officer Keresman's appointment was made by Charles C. Peterson of Jamestown, who is president of the conference, having been elected at the eighth annual convention in the Waldorf Hotel in New York city. The next convention will be at Jamestown where Mr. Keresman will be called upon to appear before the organization of patrolmen to read the records of the year's activities.

Before naming a successor to the late secretary, Mr. O'Reilly, President Peterson conferred with practically all of the higher-ups in police circles throughout the state, and finally arrived at the conclusion that no other policeman was more capable than Peter Keresman. The Kingston man, a patrolman for the last 14 years, has always been interested in matters of the law enforcing department and his activities as president of the Kingston Patrolmen's Benevolent Association have meant much to the local body.

The secretary of the New York State Police Conference is also a member of the State Legislative Committee with Joseph P. Moran, president of the New York City Patrolmen's Association and Frank J. Carr, president of the Erie Police Club of Buffalo.

The new appointment, although bringing much honor to him, is just another job to Peter Keresman, who besides being one of the most alert officers in the conduct of police activities, is widely interested in the affairs of Kingston Post, American Legion, and the City Bowling League of which he is president.

TWO CHILDREN INJURED; HIT DYNAMITE WITH AXE

The Catskill Mail of Friday says:

As a result of finding a dynamite fuse cap in their father's barn, Sophia, 12 years old, and John, 11, children of Sam Zinko of Cementon, were rushed to the Memorial Hospital here shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday, to be treated for injuries received when one of the youngsters struck the explosive with an axe.

The children evidently knew the nature of the cap they had found, but did not realize that it was dangerous as a plaything. They placed the fuse on a stone, procured the axe and struck the explosive a sharp blow.

There was a deafening explosion and the two children were found bleeding from several wounds. Dr. B. W. Gifford of Saugerties was called by telephone and he hurried to the Zinko home. After giving first aid he advised that the two children be taken to the Memorial Hospital for further treatment.

VANDAL DAMAGED NEW POUGHKEEPSIE GOLF LINKS

The municipal golf course on College hill in Poughkeepsie, which has been under construction since last fall and which is to be formally presented to the public this afternoon, was defaced Thursday night by a vandal who, armed appaprently with a crow-bar, uprooted large portions of two greens and dug out two of the clay tees.

The act, the reason for which authorities were unable to establish or conceive, was sharply reproved by Ernest L. Owen, president of the board of public works, under whose supervision the links were built and by Frank M. Berry, superintendent of parks, who personally supervised the construction.

Rev. Mr. Smith To Preach Farewell Sermon on Sunday

Pastor of Wurts Street Baptist Church Active in the Ministry for Over Half a Century to Make His Home at Vernon Center, Near Utica.

The Rev. Charles B. Smith, pastor of the Wurts Street Baptist Church for the past eight years, on Sunday will preach his farewell sermon to his congregation and retire from the active ministry of the church. The Rev. Mr. Smith has served as a minister for over half a century. Three years ago on Sunday evening, February 9, 1930, his fiftieth anniversary in the ministry was celebrated with appropriate services in the church, the congregations of the Rondout Presbyterian Church and Trinity M. E. Church uniting in the service. The anniversary sermon that evening was preached by Dr. Smith's son, the Rev. Stanley Bennett Smith.

The retiring pastor was born at Cooper's Plains, N. Y., and studied for the ministry at Corning Academy at Corning and later at Webster University at Atlanta, Georgia. His first pastorate was at East Troupsburg, N. Y., where he became pastor of the church there on February 8, 1880, and served that church for three years.

Following his first charge Dr. Smith served the churches at Rushford, N. Y., Warren, Pa., Herkimer, N. Y., Rhinebeck, Orange, Mass., Jordansville, N. Y., Red Hook, Croton Falls and his present charge.

During the eight years that Dr. Smith has served the Wurts Street Church as its pastor he has been active in the religious life of the city, and has made many friends not only among his own congregation but the city at large.

Dr. and Mrs. Smith plan to make their future home at Vernon Center, near Utica, N. Y., where they own their own home.

Dr. Smith became pastor of the Wurts Street Baptist Church in 1925.

Six Navy Planes Fly 2,059 Miles Non-Stop

Washington, Sept. 9 (AP)—A proud navy today wrote a new achievement into its crowded annals—the longest non-stop formation flight in history.

Unchecked by storm winds, six planes had winged in a single hop the 2,059 miles from Norfolk, Va., to Coco Solo in the canal zone.

When they landed at 5:25 last night, five of the fleet were timed for the long jump, in 24 hours and 55 minutes. The sixth dropped behind during the afternoon but soon joined the flotilla at Coco Solo.

To Lieutenant Commander D. M. Carpenter, flight commander, and the 10 other officers and 25 enlisted men who made the flight, navy chieftains sped their congratulations. Acting Secretary Henry L. Roosevelt said:

"Sincerest congratulations on your splendid feat. The navy and the nation are proud of you for having accomplished the longest non-stop formation seaplane flight in history."

The six seaplanes left Norfolk at 5:30 p. m. Thursday night and passed over Cuba shortly after 8 o'clock Friday morning. From there, the usual course would have drawn the ships westward to follow the curving Central American shore line southward.

But instead, Carpenter led his planes in an 800-mile jump over the Caribbean Sea, battling through stiff winds.

Navy officials said the longest previous mass flight was made by General Italo Balbo's planes when Italy's air marshal flew to Brazil in 1931. In his recent trip, the longest non-stop jump was 1,677 miles.

Feather Bed Fire In Cuneo's Hotel

Shortly after 8 o'clock Friday evening the fire department responded to a still alarm for a fire in a store room on the third floor of Cuneo's Hotel at 614 Broadway. When the firemen arrived they found hotel employes busy throwing pails of water on the fire, and with the use of chemicals the firemen soon had the fire under control. There was a feather mattress stored in the room and the burning feathers caused a dense volume of smoke which filled the entire top floor. The firemen opened a skylight to allow the smoke to escape.

The fire is thought to have been caused by spontaneous ignition of some oily rags left in the room by painters who had been working in the hotel. The damage was slight.

CHARGED WITH PASSING COUNTERFEIT $5 BILLS

Kenneth Ryan, 24, of Hudson, arrested by a U. S. secret service agent on a charge of passing counterfeit money, was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner A. C. Connelly Friday. He waived examination and was held in $5,000 bail for appearance in district court. He was committed to the Ulster county jail pending the arrival of a U. S. marshal.

Ryan is charged with passing counterfeit $5 bills in Hudson.

Total Registration In Public Schools

City School Pupils Number 3,135, High School Enrollment is 1,694—Board of Education Gets Report.

Superintendent of Schools B. C. Van Ingen submitted a report of registration at the various schools to the board of education at its regular meeting Friday evening. In the public schools of the city on Wednesday morning there were 3,135 registered and at the high school 1,694. Since that time additional registrations have been received at the grade schools and the high school registration has been raised to 1,789. This is slightly more than the registration at the 1933 midterm period. If the January registrations at the beginning of next mid-year term are normal, the registration at the high school will be the largest ever recorded and the building, now overcrowded, will be taxed to care for the pupils.

The session of the board was a brief one. Vice President Walter presided in the absence of President Beeres, who is vacationing. Present were Trustees LeFever, Byrn, Katz, Kearney, Cragan, Feeney, Mathews and Walter.

Bills amounting to $3,961.73 were audited and ordered paid, as was the payroll amounting to $5,553.39.

The finance committee was authorized to audit bills for interest due on October 1, 1933, and issue warrants in payment for same. This action was taken since the next meeting of the board will be held too late to permit audit by the board in regular session. Warrants for interest could not be drawn in time if audited in regular session since the meeting comes late in the month.

A report was made by the building committee to the effect that all repair work authorized to be done during the summer vacation period had been completed.

Superintendent Van Ingen submitted the following report, which was received and filed, and the board then went into executive session:

To the Board of Education:

I am submitting for your information the following registration figures for the several schools as reported Wednesday afternoon:

No. 5	522
No. 6	546
No. 7	498
No. 8	463
Total	3,135
High School	1,694

On Friday morning the number in High School had increased to 1789 (839 girls, 950 boys). It is probable that the registration in the grammar schools has increased somewhat since the above numbers were submitted.

Rumblings Of Another Coup In Cuba; Army Officers Are Held

Plot Is Seen To Unseat Leftist Commission and Replace It With De Cespedes and His Cabinet—U. S. Cruiser Carrying Secretary of Navy Swanson Departs From Cuban Waters—Improvement In The Administration Promised.

Havana, Sept. 9 (AP)—Rumblings of a possible coup against a four-day-old Cuban junta, itself the product of revolt, grew today as 200 army officers were held virtual prisoners in the National Hotel.

The men, leaders under the deposed De Cespedes regime, had convened to consider their course when several companies of heavily armed soldiers swooped down on the hotel and, with machine guns, surrounded it.

Fulgencio Batista, one-time sergeant who now is commander of the army, gave the officers until 10 a. m. today to obey his orders that they return to their posts, from which they were evicted Monday when Batista led a revolt and established a commission form of government.

Last night, when the guard about the hotel was increased, they emphatically answered "No" to the demands. "We do not recognize this government," said one of them. "Let the commissioners get out."

The officers freely said they were prepared to sell their lives dearly if efforts were made to arrest them or send them back to duty at the point of guns.

The government was said to have received reports that the officers, some of whom still count on the loyalty of their units, had planned to attack the presidential palace.

Other rumors—unverified but nevertheless generally taken as explanations for the course of events—were that Horacio Ferrer, De Cespedes' secretary of war, Julio Sanguily, and others of high rank, plotted to unseat the leftist commission and replace it with either De Cespedes and his cabinet or by some "concentration" government.

Tending to confirm that rumor, according to some observers, was the arrest in Bayamo, Jiguani, Manzanillo, and Palma Soriano of 16 men who were accused of planning a coup on behalf of former president Mario G. Menocal.

Meanwhile, with the departure from Cuban waters of the U. S. Cruiser Indianapolis, carrying Secretary of the Navy Swanson, a promise was made of an improvement in the administration.

The promise came from Sergio Carbo, spokesman for the executive commission, and represented a departure from the Junta rule.

Carbo said the commission, in sessions that lasted far into the night, considered establishing a coalition cabinet with a president at its head, to replace the five commissioners.

A meeting of the commissioners and representatives of the eight organizations opposing Gerardo Machado—whose overthrow August 12 led to the naming of Carlos Manuel De Cespedes as provisional president—was scheduled for today to continue a study of what kind of rule would be acceptable to all.

Reports that American marines had landed in Santiago and Cienfuegos aroused considerable discussion among the various groups until Ruben Leon, a member of the student directory, announced he had authentic information that the marines had merely inspected the town and departed.

Advices direct from Cienfuegos denied that marines had landed at all and said a destroyer expected there had not arrived.

Two prisoners were killed and two were wounded when guards quelled a riot at Guantanamo prison but indications were lacking that this trouble had political significance.

The Indianapolis remained in the harbor two hours before proceeding on an inspection tour to Panama and the west coast, and Secretary Swanson did not go ashore.

Judges Announced In Prize Map Contest

George W. Codwise, Sidney K. Clapp and Henry D. Darrow are the three judges who will pass on the maps that are to be submitted in the very unique contest on Kingston street geography and also for those who can plot the various mountain peaks visible from the corner of Stephan and Florence street. The purpose is in connection with the street map to show the distance from the corner of Hayes and Florence streets to points as distant as Forsyth Park and Kingston Point, also to places as near as the general post office, the high school, the Broadway Theatre and the hospital. Neatness, accuracy and originality will be the basis for grading all maps.

Awards will also be made for those who submit the best letters showing the routes they would follow either walking, by automobile, bicycle, roller skates, hop, skip and jump or any other mode of locomotion from the corner of Florence and Hayes streets to the places designated.

The judges are all civil engineers, thoroughly acquainted with the street system of the city, the mountain geography, with map making, and consequently competent to make the awards without bias or favor. The date of the closing of the contest has been extended to September 30, 1933.

Rug Shaking Case Aired In Court

After a lengthy trial in police court this morning in the complaint lodged by Mrs. Esther Richter against Mrs. Tillie Campbell the motion made by Attorney Walter J. Miller, attorney for Mrs. Campbell, to dismiss the complaint was granted by Judge Culloton. Mrs. Richter was represented by Attorney H. LeRoy Gill.

Mrs. Richter, who resides on First avenue testified that last June Mrs. Campbell, who resided in the same house at that time, came out on the front porch and began shaking rugs while the Richter baby was asleep in a baby carriage about five feet away. Mrs. Richter claimed that the act was done maliciously owing to certain unhappy differences which had for some time existed between the two families.

Mrs. Campbell testified that she had no right to the use of the back yard and that she had no other place to shake rugs except on the front porch.

Several witnesses were sworn and testified to the happenings of the morning in question.

Bernard V. Roach On Public Works Board

Bernard V. Roach of 35 Stuyvesant street, an engineer in the employ of the state highway department, on Friday afternoon was appointed a member of the board of public works to succeed E. Frank Flanagan, whose term had expired. Mayor Carey in his notice of the appointment of Commissioner Roach stated that Mr. Flanagan did not desire a reappointment, "feeling that since he was a candidate for mayor on the Democratic ticket that the duties of his commissionership and his actions for election might conflict."

Commissioner Roach is appointed for a term of four years, expiring September 7, 1937.

Commissioner Roach it is understood is to have charge of the work of resurfacing the Boulevard, which is to be taken over as a state project. He was recently employed on state road jobs in Dutchess county. He was a member of the National Guard for a number of years and is a past commander of the Joyce-Schirck Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

August Rainfall Very Heavy Here

During the month of August the city engineer's department acquired very valuable rainfall data for the economic and adequate design of sewers in the city, due to the exceptional quantities and intensity of precipitation during the month when 5.74 inches of rainfall was recorded at the local gauging station. This amount is about 2¾ inches more than the normal amount for August and is greater than any previous month of the year. There were sixteen days on which rain fell and the total time period amounted to 72 hours 20 minutes.

Notable features of the August rainfall were the length of the individual storms which ranged from eight to twenty-four hours; the uniformity of direction from which they came, eight coming from the southeast and eight from the northeast, indicating coastal storms or what are commonly called "northeasters"; and, finally, the extreme intensity of each storm which varied from the high points of 1.02 to 3 inches per hour.

Boats Light and Swift

Natives of the Aleutian Islands, Alaska, used to make sealskin boats so light that a seven-year-old boy could carry one and so swift that "birds could not leave them behind."

Ganging Up On Gangland

An American "Scotland Yard" — Is It The Remedy?

The London "Bobby" here stands against a background of his police headquarters, the famous Scotland Yard, the English city's chief barrier against the criminal. The "Arch of Doom" connects two sections of the detective headquarters, whose methods have been suggested as a pattern for American strategy against crime.

This is the last of three articles dealing with America's problems in combating crime and the criminal. It looks behind the grim walls of London's Scotland Yard, which some have suggested should be copied this side of the Atlantic.

By SIGRID ARNE

Washington (AP)—"Scotland Yard" suddenly has become a recurring phrase wherever Americans consider the alarming proportions of the national crime problem.

Many have asked how the organization and methods of the famous London detective and police center could be copied in this country's war on crime and gangland.

Copeland's "Scotland Yard"

Senator Royal S. Copeland of New York, fresh from his conduct of the Senate committee investigation of racketeering, proposes as a form of American Scotland Yard the setting up of a force of law officers with a dual responsibility for the enforcement of both state and federal laws.

But how would the United States build up this organization designed to combat crime with the technique employed by the famous English organization? Here's Copeland idea:

Training Plan Proposed

"Let each governor pick a man he considers capable of work with the bureau of investigation," he says. "Then send those men here to the bureau and train them, after an examination has proved them fit candidates.

"They should then be stationed back in their states and paid by the federal government. Let each governor make such men in his state 'dollar-a-year' men, commissioned to enforce the state laws as well as the federal laws."

What is Scotland Yard, how large is its force and how extensive the detective and police work it does?

"Yard" Is London's Police

Actually—say federal authorities who have made it a special study—it is merely the metropolitan police force of London, with 20,000 men, including a force of 1,000 detectives. It costs annually around $30,000,000 and has jurisdiction over the city's 700 square miles and 8,000,000 people.

Its specially trained officers can enter only local cases where the local constable requests aid.

Its detective are carefully trained in scientific detection.

"But this is also true of our federal officers," says Senator Copeland, "and our federal bureau has a much larger file of fingerprints and just as well developed a set of case histories of criminals."

Admission Requirements Strict

The candidate for Scotland Yard must be between 20 and 27 years old, healthy and intelligent and be a British subject of pure British descent.

The successful applicant goes to training school for a period up to seven weeks. He becomes a probationer and gets a post if he passes the examination at the end of this training period, but takes two more examinations before being finally appointed—if he is fortunate. Not more than five per cent of the men who enroll are accepted ultimately.

Whilem any similarly stringent requirements hold true in various American police forces, Senator Copeland says: "The need is to supply smaller communities with trained aid, which could be given through the American 'Scotland Yard' plan which I propose.

'Dollar-A-Year' Men

"It would place one or several men in each state, trained at the federal bureau of investigation and paid by the federal government, who would in addition have the right to enter local cases by virtue of the governor making them 'dollar-a-year' men."

At present, authorities point out, federal officers can enter local cases only where a federal offense is involved.

In addition to his "Scotland Yard" proposal aimed at the removal of this barrier to federal participation, Senator Copeland urges:

Better control of the manufacture, sale and transportation of firearms.

Absolute prohibition of the sub-caliber machine gun.

Cooperation among states so that fugitive witnesses cannot escape. Making refusal to testify a felony. Universal fingerprinting as a duty of citizenship.

Local NRA Official Notices and Rulings

Last evening at the Y. M. C. A., complaints were listened to by a committee consisting of former Mayor Walter P. Crane, Matthew H. Herzog, James A. Dwyer, all of the Ulster county NRA committee and Walter C. Donnarumma of the Kingston NRA committee. Complaints of a nature considered very serious were presented to the committee by various complainants who personally appeared before the committee. Immediate action shall be taken on the complaints. Following the session last evening at the headquarters the following statement was issued:

"Employers are again urged to make themselves familiar with all the provisions to which they have pledged themselves when they signed the President's Re-employment Agreement. After listening to complaints this evening we feel that either a lack of information, misconception or perhaps wilful violation are the cause of these complaints. It must be understood that the NRA expects all to abide by their pledges. The local committee certainly shall insist that they do."

Complaints may be brought before the committee when they meet at the Y. M. C. A. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings between 7-9 p. m. After complaints have been registered they will be handled by the compliance committee. All complaints are handled strictly confidentially.

Barber Shop-Beauty Shop Industry.

The following provisions have been permitted by General Johnson for the Barber Shop and Beauty Shop industry:

1. No barber and no other employes (except those covered in Section 3) shall be employed or shall work more than 48 hours in any one week.

2. No beautician and no other employes (except those covered in Section 3) shall be employed or shall work more than 48 hours in any one week.

3. No barber or beautician shall employ any accounting, clerical or office employe for more than 40 hours in any one week.

4. On and after the effective date of this code, no barber of beautician shall employ any person under 16 years of age.

5. The maximum hours shall not apply to persons engaged in the managerial or executive capacities, but shall apply to owners or operators of a barber or beauty shop actively working at barbering or actively engaged in beauty work.

6. Barbers and beauticians shall be required to finish serving all patrons who arrived and remained in the shop for service before the time of closing, and then time of such service shall not be computed in determining the total number of hours worked under the provisions of this code. No overtime shall be paid for such services.

7. The hours of operation of any barber shop or beauty shop shall not be reduced below 52 hours in any one week unless such hours were less than 52 hours July 1, 1933, and in the latter case not to reduce such hours at all.

The rest of the President's re-employment agreement (the blanket code) still applies to the beauty and barber shop industry. Only the above printed provisions are to be exercised by this industry.

Any questions concerning this code will be answered at the Y. M. C. A. headquarters, Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings between the hours of 7 and 9 p. m.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Carpinteria, Calif., Sept. 9—R. W. Waycott, retired Pasadena capitalist, is not a man to bandy words.

He heard a young man shout that his sweetheart had quarreled with him and was trying to drown herself.

Waycott got into a boat and told her to climb in. She said, "Go away."

"Climb aboard at once or I'll hit you over the head with this oar and drag you in," said Waycott.

She did and Waycott took her ashore, where she resumed the quarrel and departed without a "thank you" to her rescuer.

His Recipe

New York—Frank Meier, chief bartender at the Ritz bar in Paris is here with a recipe for making a bartender. He says it requires a dash of personality and a drop or so of art added to a lot of knowledge.

Watta Teacher

Allerton, Ill.—Miss Grace Rawleigh, teacher, took enough chewing gum to school with her to supply each of her twenty-nine pupils with three sticks each. She told them to chew all they wished and try to forget the excessive heat.

He Means Well

New York—Helpful Henry—who means well—almost drowned a man and boy.

He appeared on a pier yesterday just as Kostas Couvaraf dove in and started to swim to shore with a boy in distress. The helpful one figured action was called for. He seized a rope, tied a knot in it and lassoed Couvaraf around the neck.

Couvaraf was near drowning before someone made Henry let go of the rope. Couvaraf then swam ashore with the boy.

Helpful Henry disappeared before anyone could learn his real name or thank him.

Pretty Good For a Cripple

Youngstown—Frank Long, golf professional at Hubbard, was in an automobile accident and some of his ribs were cracked. His physician told him to stay off the links for some time.

Long disobeyed. His score was 33-33—66, only one stroke over the course record he set last year.

This coming week the Kingston Community Concert Association will launch its sixth annual membership drive. At this time the music lovers of Kingston will have an opportunity through their support of the association once again to bring to this city a series of concerts during the fall and winter. Within the five years of the association's existence the concerts they have sponsored have become a permanent part of the cultural life of the community. Those who have been faithful supporters of the movement during those years can recall only with satisfaction the opportunity they were given of hearing such artists as the English Singers, the Flonzaley Quartet, the Philadelphia String Simfonietta, Richard Crooks, Joseph Levine, Elizabeth Rethberg, and Harold Bauer. Although the calibre of the concerts is determined by the budget secured, the association can assure its members in advance of artists of note, since they have over a hundred selections from which to choose on the list submitted by the community concert service. In opening its campaign the local association is holding a reception musicale at the Governor Clinton Hotel on Monday evening, September 11, at eight o'clock. All those who are interested in supporting the Kingston Community Concert Association are invited to attend. AUTOMOTIVE EVOLUTION

A British automotive engineer, speaking in Chicago at the international congress of motor men, made a criticism of American cars which perhaps will not impress casual hearers greatly, but which probably deserves consideration. "The American car," he said, "is the triumph of effectiveness over efficiency." That is, it is built capable of performing marvels of speed which will never be required of it.

While that may be a matter of opinion and national temperament, it is certainly true today that it is possible to drive a good car faster than it ought to be driven for safety. If American cars are to be used to their full speed capacities, American highways will have to be revolutionized, with speedways entirely separate from other thoroughfares. In the matter of weight, too, the American car is doubtless heavier than necessary for all normal pleasure and business use. The added weight increases gas consumption without meeting any sound need.

We may turn up our noses at the Briton's comments, but that does not answer his criticism. At the same international congress, William B. Stout, an American motor designer who usually knows what he's talking about, voiced the opinion that automobiles today are all wrong and that the sooner we admit it and do something about it the better off everyone will be. It is not improvements they need, but completely new design. In the matter of automobile design and engineering, apparently, there is as much advancement ahead as we have already had in this amazing industry.

STRONGER BEER

One of the less solemn signs of the times is an American Beer Exposition in Cleveland, lasting for a week, showing the most important brews now made in this country and promising some new ones for the near future. In the main arena of the exposition hall an army of waiters has been serving "the largest beer garden in the world," with a seating capacity of 3,000.

That hall must be a good place to study beer drinkers as well as the beverage itself. They are said to be a happy crowd—not too orderly, if by order you mean quietness and dignity, but good-natured and seldom rowdy. Beer, it seems, has become more than a mere beverage. It now stands, in the minds of millions, for sentiment, poetry, music and freedom. All this, be it understood, is 3.2 stuff, generally accepted and liberally consumed as non-intoxicating. Probably it is the intangible constituents of the brew that produce the easy fellowship, talkativeness and musical abandon.

Most of the brewers say they are now making stronger stuff, up around 5 per cent, and as alcoholic as potent German brews. That, of course, is not on the market. They are getting ready for repeal of the dry amendment. The latter part of the winter there will be still more enthusiastic choruses of "How Dry I Am," with less visible reason than ever for that sentiment.

WHAT BANKERS WANT

Several thousand bankers, in Chicago for their annual convention, have started telling each other and the country what, in their opinion, is wrong with the new deal banking. They object strongly to some features of the Glass-Steagall Act, which limits their activities and cramps their style.

Most of them dislike the new deposit guaranty feature which becomes effective the first of the year. This alone, says the president of the national association, might bring on a new banking crisis. He and others suggest that it wouldn't be so bad if individual depositors who insisted on insurance for their money should have it at their own expense. Many all-round bankers object to separating the savings, commercial and mortgage departments from each other, as is done abroad.

The bankers will be expected to furnish satisfactory substitutes for such provisions as they dislike. For one reason or another, though, it appears that just now bankers' views don't carry so far as they used to.

Simple in design, beautiful in fabrics, durable, and inexpensive, are the claims being shown for the college girl this fall. The combination is bound to make everybody happy. The girl will like it, because she has to be in style no matter what the style, and when she gets to college she usually finds herself wearing the simple and practical duds as above, and letting any others hang in the closet. It will please her mother, who likes to see the daughter wear simple clothes while she can, and who likes fine, well-woven fabrics for their beauty as well as for their wearing qualities. It will please her father, because the cost is not great—and it's hard for fathers to send their girls away this year at all. Hard to send boys, too. As for brother—he's going to college with his old suit, two new shirts, a pair of shoes and a sweater, and liking it. Why not? What's college for?

THE RESEARCH WORKER.

It is certainly gratifying to the medical profession and to all others who give the matter thought, to see grateful patients recognize the difficulties of research workers and endeavor to give them some financial aid.

Thus in England a group of asthma sufferers have completed an organization to aid research physicians who are doing work on the cause and relief of asthma.

H. G. Wells, the author, has invited his fellow sufferers with diabetes to follow the example of the asthma sufferers, and help all workers and institutions spending their time on diabetes.

He points out that, thanks to a regulated diet and to insulin, they are living active, happy lives, while a few years ago many "would have been uncomfortable and dying slowly or already dead but for the work of a small group of experimenters and practitioners who have brought this particular maladjustment or disease under control." Mr. Wells says that diabetics, now financially able to do so, should not only help these research workers but help those diabetics who are not well enough off to get the diet and insulin treatment. In other words, diabetics in good or fair circumstances should tax themselves for the benefit of all diabetics.

When we remember the years devoted to the dietetic control of diabetes by Joslin of Boston and others, then the work done by Banting and Best, discoverers of insulin, in Toronto, under the most trying circumstances, with the final refining process of insulin developed by Collip, we can get some idea of the patience and perseverence of practitioners and research men.

As you know, if these men were paid for the lives saved, it would run into many millions of dollars, aside from the happiness achieved and suffering relieved.

All that research men ask, in fact they do not ask for anything; all they would like is that they be supplied with a place and equipment with which to work, and enough to live on, and they are willing to give themselves to the relief of the ills of humanity. In fact many of them are doing this without proper equipment, and without resources to actually support themselves.

You'll agree that Mr. Wells has done a good piece of work in calling the attention of his fellow sufferers to the need of helping the cause of all diabetics.

Organ Recital At Presbyterian Church

Worship in the First Presbyterian Church on Elmendorf street this Sunday will be preceded by a 15-minute organ recital by Miss Edna Merrihew, church organist. Both choirs will participate in the special music of the service following and the new Presbyterian hymnals, published this year, will be dedicated through use. The new hymnal was procured for the local church by separate subscriptions of members, who presented them as memorial gifts. Members of the committee working on this were Mrs. Meta M. Plusch, Wallace Terpening and William H. Norwood. The new book was approved by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church this year and authorized for congregational use. Dr. Goodrich Gates, minister of the church, was a commissioner to this Assembly, elected by the Presbytery of North River.

Smaller than the older edition, this hymnal retains only a fraction of the hymns in the 1911 edition, but these are the ones most commonly used by churches and adjudged to be good poetry and music. In addition are hymns recently composed to express the moods of today and the challenge to serve the present generation and its needs. Older hymns are drawn from Scottish, Irish, Welsh, German, Scandinavian and Bohemian sources. Metrical psalms, a Scottish heritage, occupy a prominent place; traditional Dutch tunes, German chorales and English plainsong melodies are numerous.

Melancholy and introspective hymns are conspicuously absent. In their place are many reflecting joy of living with triumphant faith and hope. Hymns on divine adoration are not marred by petition or begging attitude.

Much of the work of hymn selection was done in the Hudson Valley. The committee met on a shoulder of Storm King Mountain. Here they selected the numbers after studying 5,000 hymns in general use and an equally large number of tunes. When agreement was reached the hymnal included 513 numbers as against 734 in the older edition. Both the music and poetry are of a higher order than in books published before this decade. This is explained by William Chalmers Covert, a committee chairman, who is known in Kingston, as due partly to the strong preferences of the new generation of young people in Presbyterian churches.

Dr. Gates will preach briefly on "Why We Worship." Themes of worship on this and succeeding Sundays will be centered around use of the hymnal, as a "manual of worship."

The HIDDEN DOOR

BY FRANK L. PACKARD

SYNOPSIS: Colin Hewitt, who was but late set on on the murder of Captain Dolores and has run-running craft as an outlet but a mystery writer disguised as Clarkie Lunn, engages The manager was on retainer on Dollard's ending the Mask's Carolton counterfeiting plant. The Mask rules New York's underworld, and Colin hopes to track him down. Colin has returned to headquarters with Buck O'Mara, one of the Mask's gang commanders, in order to take money to Spinelli, another of the Mask's tools.

Chapter 11

ON THE STAIRWAY

THE car had been ordered to wait half a block away, where Colin was to rejoin it and then continue on to Spinelli's.

He followed Buck O'Mara now along the alleyway that flanked the tobacco store, and turned into the lane behind. It was intensely dark, but as they began to skirt the rear of the building he could distinguish the outline of a door. They passed this—and halted before another one a few yards farther on.

He remembered what Benny Malone had said. The first door was the one common to the mob; this one, of course, was the private entrance to the quarters above that were sacred to the big shots. He would very much like to see those quarters. But would Buck O'Mara invite him inside, or would he be told to wait out here for the money he was to take to Spinelli?

Buck O'Mara had been fumbling in the darkness with his key. He opened the door and stepped inside.

"Shut the door after you, and follow me," he said; "it'll save me coming downstairs again."

Colin obeyed—and then, unheralded, as he moved across the threshold into an unlighted interior, a sudden inspiration flashed into his mind. His brain was virile, working at lightning speed now.

Suppose that instead of merely visiting these quarters as he was now obviously going to do, he could spend a night here! He would give a great deal to spend a night in the Wine Press: Much might come of it, or nothing might come of it, but it held untold possibilities.

There was Buck O'Mara himself, for instance. After what had happened in the last few hours, O'Mara was almost certain to communicate with the Mask tonight. Would it be from here? How?

The night might answer those questions—and others—if only he could stay here! And there was at least a possible way whereby he might succeed in doing so. He meant to try it now anyway. It was too big a chance to lose.

If the ruse worked, it worked; if it failed, he lost nothing, for certainly now, with the events of the early part of the night to endorse him, Clarkie Lunn would hardly be suspected of guile!

His arm had been bleeding a little again on the ride in. He had felt the blood soaking through the bandage, but it had not run down on his hand. Buck O'Mara had not noticed it—and he, Colin, had said nothing about it. It would take very little to start the blood flowing as profusely as ever; it would look infinitely worse than it really was, and—

A light went on. Buck O'Mara was mounting a flight of stairs whose rather shabby carpet, Colin noted, was strictly in keeping with the Barneys' floor coverings downstairs.

"Come on," O'Mara called over his shoulder.

"Sure!" said Colin—and, gripping his coat sleeve, wrenched at the bandage underneath. He felt the bandage give—and, by the time he had mounted, three or four more steps, a trickle of blood upon his hand. He kept his hand behind his back. It would not look serious enough yet.

KEEPING close behind the other, he reached the topmost stair and stepped out into what proved to be a narrow hallway carpeted like the stairs—and here Buck O'Mara spoke again:

"Wait here, Clarkie," he directed. "It'll take me two or three minutes to get the kale, and then you can go back the way you came."

"Sure!" said Colin for the second time.

And then, as Buck O'Mara moved away along the hall, Colin squeezed at his wounded arm—and bit his lips. It was paining now—but the blood was flowing freely. His hand was red with it. As for the rest—that remained to be seen! The stage was set, anyway.

His eyes searched swiftly around him. Buck O'Mara had disappeared through the doorway of the farther one of the only two rooms that led off from the hall—and had even left the door open behind him. A gesture on O'Mara's part that cost nothing, since from O'Mara's casual reference to the emergency safe it was certainly no secret from the rank and file that there was one here!

The two rooms, of course, were the two bedrooms of which Benny Malone had spoken, and which obviously looked out on the alleyway, since they were on his left.

On his right was a sort of heterogeneous wall, some of it ornate in both plaster and wood, relics no doubt of the old Wine Press in its heyday—and some of it of newer but cheap construction, undoubtedly the parsimonious handiwork of old Koppelstein when he had made the building into two.

At the far end of the hall was another stairway—the one, of course, that led to the Barneys' quarters below, and that he had seen when he had come in through the tobacco store. Nothing else!

It was a bit bizarre, of course, with its two stairways and its crazy-quilt wall; but, since these were readily explainable to anyone as being but an inheritance from the old Wine Press, there was nothing else about the place to excite comment, let alone suggest that it was the lair of gangster and mob leaders.

His inspection at an end, Colin moved over and leaned against the wall. A minute, two, another passed. His eyes were on the doorway of Buck O'Mara's room now—and he was nursing his arm and hand, and sagging heavily against the wall as Buck O'Mara, carrying a large, bulky envelope in his hand, stepped out into the hall.

Buck O'Mara came to an abrupt halt. Mechanically he took the cigarette he was smoking from his mouth.

"What the hell!" he ejaculated.

Colin swayed a little.

"I'm sorry, Buck," he protested. "I didn't mean to let you down. I—I feel kind of weak."

WITH a perplexed scowl Buck O'Mara crossed the hall and fronted Colin. He stared at Colin's hand.

"Why didn't you tell me about this before?" he demanded.

"I did," said Colin. "In the cabin."

"But you said it wasn't anything."

"I didn't think it was. Then, my arm began to bleed—bad." He was jerking out his words heavily. "Some of the mob put a bandage on it for me, and it stopped. But coming back in the car it began a little again and—"

"Well," Buck O'Mara cut in bluntly, "why didn't you say something about it then?"

Colin clutched vaguely at the wall—steadied himself.

"Aw, say, I didn't want to welch on you," he explained earnestly. "It wasn't bad enough for that—only a drop or two. It was only when I was coming up the stairs there that it got like this. The—bandage must've slipped or—something."

Buck O'Mara laughed out shortly. "Well, anyway, you're not as bad off as Benny!" he flung out. "I guess you're some kid, all right."

"It don't amount to anything," asserted Colin weakly, "except that I—I'm afraid I couldn't get very far right now. It's only that kale for Spinelli I'm thinking of. Gee, I'm sorry about this, Buck."

"Forget that!" said Buck O'Mara crisply. "Barney can attend to it. But I can't send you to a hospital with a gunshot wound even if it's not serious, so it looks like you'd have to rest up here for a few hours. I'd let you stretch out in that other room only I'm expecting Helmie'll blow in, and want it. But there's the sofa downstairs in Barney's parlor that you can have, and Mrs. Barney'll fix your arm up for you."

Colin's right hand went to his wounded forearm—and tightened over sleeve and bandage. He had lost all the blood he cared to spare! He knew a sense of exultation. Nothing might come of it; but at least he had won the first trick—he would spend the rest of the night in the Wine Press.

The ARCH of TITUS

NO Jew ever passes under the Arch of Titus in Rome since it commemorates the fall of Jerusalem, the event that brought the history of the Jews as a nation to an end. In 70 A.D., Vespasian, the Roman general, was called to Rome to become emperor. He left his son, Titus, to subdue Jerusalem, the last Jewish stronghold in Palestine. After a six-months' siege in which over a million perished, the city was captured. The Roman army ransacked the temple and carried off a fortune in spoils.

The arch which was restored more than a century ago by Valadier, is the finest and most important that Roman art produced. Sculptured on its surfaces are pictures of the triumphant return of the emperor from Jerusalem, bearing captives and a large seven-branch candelabra as trophies.

Titus ordered the construction of the arch when he became emperor in 79 A.D. He died after reigning only two years and the arch was finally erected in 82 A.D., one year after his death, by his brother, Domitian.

Starts Work On His Second Indian Statue

Shokan, Sept. 8.—Emile Brunel, nationally known photographic artist of New York city and Boiceville, last week commenced the preliminary work on a second Indian statue at his "Chalet Indien" on the north boulevard. The new figure, that of a squaw in a half kneeling position with papoose in arms, will be erected at a point a few yards east of the now familiar statue of Chief Moon Haw-Haw and at a slightly lower elevation on the sloping eminence near the entrance to the Brunel country home. Iron piping has already been fixed in a concrete bed on which it is planned to mould the mammoth concrete base, and these have been extended to a height sufficient for allowing the upper ends to project into the statue proper, with a view to securing the superstructure firmly to the concrete block. The new monument, like that of the chief, will be sculptured entirely in concrete, after a clay model, about eight inches in height, which has just been completed by Mr. Brunel.

For the edification of passersby on the north Ashokan boulevard, as well as for visitors to the chalet, Mr. Brunel has placed near his studio along the highway an artistically lettered board, bearing the following text, as explaining the significance of the Indian statue and the towering multi-colored and grotesquely gargoyled totem pole which stands near it: "Erected and Dedicated to the Great White Spirit and to the Grandeur and Mysteries of Nature as a Token of Admiration of the Beauty of the Catskill Mountains and in memory of the Travelers to the happy Hunting Grounds.—E. Brunel, Boiceville, N. Y." Appropriately enough, at the base of the statue of the chief, there is a small pool, constructed of rocks, into which flows a stream of clear, cold Catskill Mountain water, piped from one of the five never-failing springs on the place. During the recent drouth, this water supply was frequented by neighbors of the Brunel family, who were glad indeed to climb the steep slope leading up to the monument in order to secure good drinking water for their homes.

Chief Moon Haw-Haw, as done in stone, stands with arms outstretched towards the setting sun and in the general direction of Moonhaw, that picturesque sylvan retreat at the base of the eastern slope of the Wittenberg Range. It was there that Indians of the name had their camping grounds until finally ousted from their home lands by the Hardenburghs and Livingstons, who received a 600-acre grant in that section from Queen Anne of England in 1708. The Moonhaws held tenaciously to their wilderness until April 26, 1746, when they confirmed the royal grant. It was here—so history tells us—that the Earl of Egmont of Holland met, wooed and won Nonee, lovely daughter of old Chief Moonhaw whose last resting place is covered by a small beautiful lake on the club property. Here also, far across the beautiful Esopus Valley and the west basin of the Ashokan Reservoir, tower some of the highest and grandest peaks of the Catskills—High Point, Peekamoose, Slide and Samuel's Point.

Thus, at the southerly entrance to the Catskills or Onteoras ("Hills of the Sky"), Mr. Brunel, who is a native of France and has been a summer resident of Boiceville for the past twelve years, has endeavored to set forth in imperishable stone monuments, something of the spirit of the red man as well as a tribute of admiration for the incomparably beautiful mountains which they loved and in which they dwelt happily for centuries. Moreover, the location is suitable for a memorial of this kind. Only a mile to the eastward, on Toran's Hook, one of the Indians' "hills of the sky", there is a dancing floor of stone, fashioned by the red men in days long past, while to the westward, and almost at the chief's feet, lie the Esopus and the Ashokan, the former signifying "water," having been known to tribes all over the state, and the latter, perpetuating the name of old Chief Ashokan, now meaning more than ever a "Place of Fish."

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON—Political observers here are asking themselves—now that Texas has joined the repeal parade—whether or not Morris Sheppard's uncompromisingly dry views might some day bring him to a political Waterloo.

MORRIS SHEPPARD

The gray-haired senator, who takes such pride in the title so often bestowed on him as the "father of prohibition" because of his co-authorship of the eighteenth amendment, has just seen his own state repudiate the pride of his long legislative career.

• • •

PERHAPS no man in congress has fought harder for anything than has Sheppard for the eighteenth amendment.

It has been a fight he has waged relentlessly in congress for more than 20 years. He believes in his cause as strongly today as he did then. He emerged from defeat in Texas with "fresh hope," he said, and with confidence.

• • •

Breasting Many Storms

JUST as there are those who believe that when he comes up for reelection in 1936 the seat in the senate he has held since 1913 may be taken from him, so there are others equally insistent that he will weather the storm once more.

He has done it before, the latter point out, and under conditions as adverse if not more so than those he now faces.

Many thought his political demise was certain back in 1928 when he supported Al Smith for President. Texans flocked to the Hoover banner literally by the thousands in that presidential campaign and the state went republican.

• • •

SHEPPARD, however, is a loyal democrat and stood hitched to the party post. He campaigned for Smith, arguing that prohibition was not a political issue and that the party's candidate was deserving of support.

He was returned to the senate in 1930 by a tremendous majority without making a single campaign speech.

• • •

Didn't Faze Him

WHEN the Garner-for-President boom started before the democratic convention in 1932, Sheppard came out wholeheartedly for his fellow Texan. He knew that Garner had voted against the eighteenth amendment in the house, but since its adoption had voted consistently in favor of enforcement.

Just before the convention, Garner came out strongly against prohibition. Sheppard took it smilingly, again said that prohibition was not a political issue and continued to support Garner. Garner got the vice presidency on the ticket with Roosevelt and on a platform that called for repeal. The senator again stood hitched, even making speeches for the democratic candidates.

His friends say that many a man would have lost out long ago under such reverses.

Old Li Ching Lun

Li Ching Lun was an aged Chinese who died at an age of 197. Records at the Changtu university, however, have reference to one Li Ching-yun being congratulated on his one hundred and fiftieth birthday in 1828. His principal diet was herbs and rice wine. It was said that he had outlived 23 wives, was living with his twenty-fourth and had 11 generations of descendants.

Tea Called Narcotic in Tunis

In Tunis tea is considered a narcotic. To discourage its use, a heavy tax was placed on it. The Tunisians are not satisfied to drink tea in the ordinary way. They mix it with spices and boil it until it has acquired the thickness of syrup. Mixed with sugar they drink it in such quantities that they become stupefied and lack the energy to work.—San Francisco Chronicle.

ONE TAXPAYER WHO APPRECIATES MR. WALKER

Kingston, N. Y.,
Sept. 7, 1933

Editor,
Dear Sir:

Will you kindly please permit space in your very valuable paper for an expression of appreciation of the very commendable action of Fire Commissioner Harry B. Walker in his stand against further burdens being placed on the taxpayers of our city.

It is indeed very refreshing to read that at least one of our public officials had the interests of the now over-burdened taxpayer in mind, and had the courage to speak out against the demands being made by our city firemen and policemen, a very fine group of well intentioned, but I might say at the present time, rather selfish men.

The firemen and policemen have steady jobs at a very much higher salary than they could possibly make in any other line of work. They have vacations with pay, no loss of wages for sick periods, free medical attendance for themselves and families. They have indeed been very well taken care of by our city, and if their action could only be influenced from motives, not to their own private advantage, but to the general interests of their average fellow citizen, the high esteem in which they are held, could more reasonably be maintained.

We need more men of the type of Mr. Walker, and I am offering my thanks and will give my support to men of this kind of courage and stop thinking for us fellows who are having a tough time in paying the taxes already assessed.

Talks to parents

Granting Independence

By BROOKS PETERS CHURCH

One of the most difficult moments in rearing children is the time when they first show their independence.

Parents know from the outset that the time must come when their children will step out for themselves. They may even make a resolution that when it comes they will put no obstacles in the way of the child's freedom.

But they forget during the years when their babies are little and seem so helpless and dependent. They are so close to the picture that they do not even see that every day the baby of the day before is gone and a new and older one in its place.

They are taken quite unaware when the tiny thing they have been cherishing one day states an opinion, claims a privilege or asserts a right which shows that he is conscious of his own identity and no longer a part of his parents.

It requires great self-control and some sacrifice of personal feeling on the part of the parents to recognize the inevitable at this stage. If they refuse to acknowledge the child's right to his own point of view and answer, "We know best, you are too young," they may quash the child's claim for the moment, but they will be laying up trouble for the future.

It is wiser to meet the situation differently.

If they give the child a hearing and try to get his point of view, they will at least be establishing a contact which will be valuable in the increasingly numerous situations of the same kind which the future will bring.

Nature gave the birds an instinct stronger than mother love. When the fledgeling is ready to fly the mother pushes it out of the nest. We tend to hold ours in it even when the nest grows too small.

Women Voters Study Conditions

ress War, from the National L. W. V.

Miss Fast said that she too had been in the woods all summer, but mentally and so far there seemed to be no optimistic winds to clear the situation. International life today requires great courage and very clear sightedness. Miss Fast considered some of what we call "hang overs" of international cooperation such as the world court which seems to be always with us. When regular sessions of congress are held next year it was indeed to be hoped that our entrance into the court would be accomplished. It seemed the more possible since nine opponents of the court had not been reelected.

It had been terribly disappointing what had come of the great economics conference. However it was obvious that ground had been broken in that we know now that other countries are having their troubles. Mr. Hull made a tremendously good impression by his quiet dignity at this conference wherein help for future work would be found. The wheat accord was a tremendous step forward.

The speaker was none too optimistic over disarmament at present though she considered the possible reduction of defensive weapons was a favorable sign. Certainly supervision of arms will be necessary before disarmament.

The realignment of the countries of Europe was interestingly pictured and the hope for the economic unity of Austria and Hungary was expressed.

Miss Fast devoted some time to the situation in Latin America today showing the need of strengthening treaties with and between those countries.

The speaker asked, what she knew those before her were asking, "What can be done about all of these problems of international cooperation to prevent war." Some feel that the munitions makers are to blame for the continual stirring up of warlike feelings and preparations but Miss Fast thought there was something else to be considered. She felt that much good could come from making it obvious and emphatic on the part of every voter to his or her legislators in time, that they were absolutely for the prevention of war. Efficiency in government could handle these problems. Miss Fast was sure, and she handed the problem over to the committee having that as their special task.

Following the addresses, several questions were asked and answered by the speakers before the sessions of the Tenth Regional meeting of the New York League of Women Voters came to a close.

Mr. Monkey

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"We have all but 17 cents," Willy Nilly said to the man at the pound. "Considering we have the two dollars for the license and almost enough to pay for Rip's board for the length of time he has been here, won't that please, please do? You don't want to break our hearts, do you?

"You don't want to destroy our Rip when we love him so and when he makes us so happy, do you? Surely you don't want to give a dog gas or shoot him when he is wanted and loved so much!"

"I'm tired of you and your talk," said the man. "I've given you a great deal of extra time."

"We'll give you extra money if you'll only wait a little longer," urged Willy Nilly, with tears in his eyes.

"If that money isn't here by tonight, your dog will not be here either," the man said decidedly.

All day long they tried to sell vegetables with tears streaming from their eyes. But Jelly Bear was having an unexpected pleasure. At the edge of the woods he had met a monkey who had got lost from his organ-grinder master.

The monkey had been terrified at seeing Jelly Bear and had climbed up a tree at once.

"Growl, growl," said Jelly Bear, "I won't hurt you. All I'm doing is to find some money. Have you any?"

"Certainly. I have lots of money in my little coat pocket. If you promise not to hurt me I'll give you all I have," answered Mr. Monkey.

The monkey had $1.32. Rip would live—if only Jelly Bear were not too late!

U. S. O. K's Hispaniola as Haitian Republic's Name

The question of a name for the island in the West Indies which comprises the Dominican Republic and the Republic of Haiti—and which has been known by various names, including Santo Domingo and Haiti—has been settled by the United States geographic board. The board approved the name Hispaniola.

For three centuries after the discovery of the island by Columbus, the name Hispaniola was widely used. In recent years the island has been known by a number of other names.

Santo Domingo, from the city of that name, now the capital of the Dominican Republic, frequently has been used to designate the island. Haiti, the name of the negro republic on the west, also has been used in designating the entire island.

No name for the island is necessary in addressing mail to either Santo Domingo or Haiti. The board points out that "Haiti" is sufficient for addressing mail to the Republic of Haiti and "Dominican Republic" for the other island republic.

"Football," says coed Cora, "has proven to most young men that a college education is necessary."

Miss Autumn Comes to Town With Latest Fall Fashions

Copyright, 1933, by Fairchild

The dress at the left in two-piece ensemble, is developed in an attractive navy blue rib knit woolen. It is fashioned simply, playing up the fabric, with the blue repeated in the silk crepe tie and the belt.

The companion frock, a tunic style, is fashioned of a plaid novelty silk that has the look of woolen. The colors are effective, two greens with a white overplaid. The buttoned and pocketed details and the high neckline are noteworthy features.

Next is the afternoon or semi-formal dinner gown, sleeved and with formal length, developed in brown transparent velvet. The metal and red brocade bodice is worked to give a broadened shoulder silhouette, without any exaggeration of actual line.

An illustration of the individual spectator sports or town costume is shown in the working out of a three-piece costume, with Oxford cloth skirt, sunny blue bodice and formally conceived jumper of Oxford and black lace knit tweed woolen. The attractively shaped girdle brings the bright color touch to view again.

The fifth model, a wool knit suit, features black for the jacket, an Oxford mixture for the skirt and white for the blouse. Padded rolls as trimming and a drawstring neckline are favored. The two-piece dress is a dark brown wool knit with a mesh yoke of lacquered leather in cocoa coloring bordered by dark brown. The same exquisite trimming is favored at the wrists.

DID YOU KNOW THAT

Such colors as wild blackberry, aubergine (eggplant) garnet, purply brown, dark green and midnight blue, representing new influences in shades for street wear; combinations of pastels for evening; the repetition of amethyst, mauves and reds with violet tinge; the endorsement of "amadou" which is a color similar to the cover of the fall textile color card—copper and rust.

A new field for the distribution of rich materials is indicated by the importance of dressy tunics and blouses for which satin, lames, and novelty materials of crepe or satin mixed with metal are used.

Chinese influences are reflected in colors, embroideries, and dress designs. Victorian and Edwardian colors and dress themes are likewise important.

Arousing the greatest amount of discussion is the new cocktail dress, especially as interpreted by Malnbocher. This is the long-sleeved dress with low cut back usually accompanied by a jacket and developed in a diversity of fabrics such as velvet, woolen, metals, laces and silks. These cocktail dresses are described as the most radical feature of the showings, and some arrivals express the belief that they will supplant the Sunday night frock.

In evening dresses what is generally termed the "Lady Lou" silhouette arouses greatest interest. These dresses are very tight fitting to the knees, with extreme fulness developed below. Frequently they have uneven hemlines sometimes seven inches from the ground at front and trailing at the back. Feather-trimmed capes worn with these gowns repeat the back dipped line. This fashion is cited as reminiscent of the 1909 to 1910 phase of costume design.

For daytime, the two-piece dress and the long tunic silhouette are strongly approved.

The velveteen blouse, fastened down the back as Bruyere does it with great brass snappers like those used on gloves, is winning favor.

The hip-length evening cape in dark velveteen is noteworthy.

Bateau necklines, revealing the shoulders, are favored for evening.

There are fur vests, sometimes matched to muffs, for wear with suits.

Pleated ruff collars are suggested by Mirande, who uses them on simple woolen dresses as well as in Pierrot-pleated versions on skins with fur.

OFFICE CAT

By Jamison

Ida Plumpleigh—Don't you think I should lengthen my skirt a little?

Dora Spindleleg—Let your chassis be your guide.

"What are the first words of the used-car buyer?" asks an advertisement. Those we ride with, always say: "You'll have to slam that door harder."

Motorist (stopping car)—I say, you! What are you lying stretched out across the roadway for?

Tramp—Well, it's like dis, mister. Dis is de only sure way I know to escape being run over.

Every now and then you see an automobile pass that must be almost paid for. Anyway they are aged-looking enough to be in the clear.

Walker—Does your wife drive a car?

Driver—Only when I am at the wheel.

However dangerous they may be for other people, the highways seem to remain fairly safe for escaping convicts and roving desperadoes, another condition that is just the opposite of what it should be.

Man—Why do her people object to Dennison Plumbering?

His Wife—There are seven in her family, and his car only holds 5.

Automobile courtship may have its faults, but it doesn't make the old folks sit in the kitchen until bedtime.

Main street man—He's a new driver.

Neighbor—What makes you think so?

Man—He hasn't got over arguing with the traffic officer yet.

When a vehicle zipped by you in the old days, it meant some horse was feeling his oats—not that some ass was feeling his rye.

Bite off more than you can chew—
Then chew it.
Undertake more than you can do—
Then do it.
Hitch your flivver to a star—Give her gas.
And there you are! ! !

We were interested in the attitude of old Uncle Lorenzo, a negro living near Yanceyville, North Carolina, who is reported to have expressed himself recently quite solidly in favor of mules instead of automobiles that are seen very frequently in his neighborhood.

"Ah laks a good ole mule mo' dan Ah does a auty-mo-bile," he said. "'cause he's mo' sociable. Now, when a mule balks yu'all kin at least figger dat he's gwinter take some interest in de conversation."

Here lie the bones of Ambrose Jones
A guy of vast conceit;
The stupid cuss had a brand-new bus,
But his head was pure concrete.
He went on the road, with a bootleg load,
Filled till he couldn't see;
He stepped on the gas, and it came to pass,
A swerve—a skid—and a tree.

Perhaps the railroads could make a little more money, even at reduced rates, if the public didn't put them to so much expense picking flivver fragments out of the locomotive running gear.

Old Aunt Minerva Pickleeimer from Brushville says: "I never in my life tried to listen to Amos Tash and his wife quarreling next door that a drafted old automobile didn't start up some where and make such a racket a body couldn't hear it thunder."

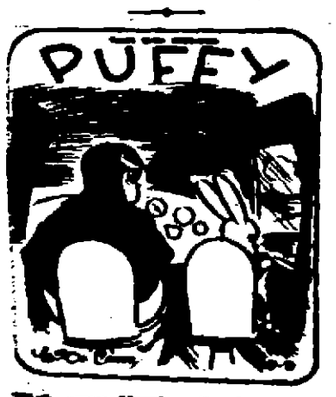
One of the most hopeful things about this country is that, in city and wildness alike, we're planting trees again.

While everybody's wondering what new industry will arise to clinch business recovery, why not do a little wondering about what new recreation will take the place of bridge indoors or golf outdoors?

At last France has fallen into line and taken up the favorite American viand, changing from "saucisse de Frankfort" to plain "hot dog," and thereby, as the Detroit News observes, adding a new link to international amity.

The neighbor girls have so many boy friends that even at our age we are gradually acquiring a rather thorough knowledge of the automobile horn language, just from environment.

The Moss Feature Syndicate, 808 Summit avenue, Greensboro, N. C.



High over Newfoundland, Puff and his chum
Listen with joy to the big motor's hum.
"I hope we don't fail," says the Chief, "R's spuzzin.
I hear that salt water is hard on the gyro!"

GAS BUGGIES—Now What's Up.

Vineyard Shore School Seeks Aid

The newest school in the group of Affiliated Schools for Workers, including the schools at Bryn Mawr College, Barnard College and the University of Wisconsin, the Vineyard Shore School, has met many difficulties in financing its program during this depression period. That it has survived at all is due to the interest of its many friends, and to the determination of students and faculty that the school should be carried on.

Unlike the ordinary academic institution, these workers' schools plan a course of instruction closely related to the problems industrial workers are meeting every day. The purpose of these schools is to offer a liberal course, to help industrial workers to understand their own problems in the light of all the facts; to stimulate clear thinking, and to inculcate a sense of social responsibility among workers. Former students of the schools have been active in promoting an educational program among many groups of workers, starting evening classes, studying legislation, and taking part in many community organizations which are interested in education or in industry. The schools are not technical nor vocational, and the students for the most part return to industry, many of them to the same trades and the same jobs.

The demand for this type of school is rapidly growing in the United States. With the shorter work day made possible by the National Industrial Recovery Act, many industrial workers are eager to study, and to put their increased leisure to some constructive use. Colleges and universities are already cooperating with these schools, and are ready to offer classrooms for workers' classes. This summer Oberlin College in Ohio offered its buildings to a group of 30 office workers, who studied there for two weeks under the auspices of the Affiliated Schools. A new workers' school, it is reported, will be started this year in California. In more than 50 industrial centers, the former students from these workers' schools, including Vineyard Shore, have been successful in interesting other workers, men and women, in a study program. Until there are now more than two hundred classes organized, for the discussion of current economic questions.

Because of lack of funds, the Vineyard Shore School will not open this fall. This does not mean however that future plans for the school are at a stand-still. The Board of Directors, now incorporated under the state laws, will use this winter to build up more permanent support, in order that when the school reopens, a larger group of students may be enrolled, and the school may look forward to increased usefulness.

Sixty young women workers from industry, in two sessions of this school, have been in attendance during the past year. The summer group finished the two months' term on August 9.

Kingston: "The Stranger's Return." Lionel Barrymore enjoys a new characterization in this appealing and human story of farm life, with Mr. Barrymore playing the part of a wise old farmer. His granddaughter from the city comes to visit him, and while she is there, he plays he is insane in order to find out how numerous sponging relatives feel about him. Of course this talkie was a made to measure screen part for the star, and never for a moment do other members in the cast share the spotlight. Yet it is one of the most enjoyable of the many Barrymore screen offerings, and well worth seeing. A fine story, a capable supporting cast, and Mr. Barrymore, cast as a witty, cagey old farm, insures any audience of an entertaining evening.

Orpheum: "Broadway Bad" and "Congorilla." The first feature with Joan Blondell and Ricardo Cortez is another story of Broadway, its bright lights and its heartbreaks. "Congorilla" is an African travel talkie, in which Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson brave perils of all descriptions to offer the audience an animal thriller that is authentic.

Broadway: "Heroes for Sale." Richard Barthelmess suffers through numerous long reels in this story that is totally void of sunshine or optimism. Blank despair, tragedy, death and dishonor stalk along side by side in this never ending odyssey of trouble. The story starts with the war. Mr. Barthelmess leaves the battlefield disillusioned, and his nerves have accepted the dope habit. He returns to America, walks the breadlines, looks for a job, and spends his time getting kicked around. During all this, his mother suicides, his wife is killed by a brick in a riot, and Barthelmess ends up in jail, unjustly charged. Then more breadlines, more trouble through the remainder of the show. Tragic, hopeless, helpless and beaten, Mr. Barthelmess wades his way through depression and sorrow, and ends up without so much as a smile. Others in the cast include Loretta Young and Aline MacMahon.

Tomorrow

Kingston: Same.

Orpheum: "Six Hours to Live," "The Fighting Marshall" and "Gordon of Ghost City." A triple feature offering with Warner Baxter the star of the first talkie, an unusual show that tells the workings of man's mind who only has six hours to live. Playing the role of a diplomat, Mr. Baxter is murdered and brought back to life for six hours only through the aid of science. What he does in those six hours makes interesting entertainment. Miriam Jordan is also in the cast. Tim McCoy heads the second talkie, a western story, and Buck Jones stars in the third picture, another western thriller.

Broadway: Same.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD — A philosophical fellow is Ed Wynn, who confines the job of being "the perfect fool" to his career as a comedian.

On the stage 31 years, a star for 17, Wynn is out here to make his second talking picture. In Hollywood as in New York, however, he is continuing his hermit-like existence.

"I like to stay home," he says. "That's the main reason I don't go around much. A contributing cause, however, is the fact that I don't like to work at being funny all the time. Twenty-two hours a week is enough time to spend at that, and after I quit work I don't like to take my job with me."

Doffing His Cap And Bells

In common with other comedians, Wynn has had the experience of finding himself called upon, on any and all occasions, to be amusing. But Ed Wynn likes to let the actor rest off-stage.

For 17 years he has made it a rule to appear in public, except professionally, as seldom as possible. Twice he has deviated from that rule here—once to attend a night club (he wished he'd stayed home) and then to attend a breakfast for the visiting governors.

Mild-mannered and genial, Wynn preaches laughter as a panacea. He thinks laughter could do away with war, and advocates a secretary of humor in the national government, courses in humor in the educational curricula.

Saving Humor

"In the crash four years ago," he recalls, "I lost a fortune that represented my life savings. I cried around for three or four days, and then—suddenly I got a funny twist on it. What I lost was money I'd never seen, a couple of theaters I seldom saw. What good were they to me, after all? You can't go around carrying an armload of dollars; so what's the difference? I snapped out of it."

In 1919 Wynn was a leader in the actors' strike that resulted in formation of Actors' Equity association. After that, because managers would have nothing more to do with him, he says, he "owned his own company. He must have made money.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN J. GOULD

(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

No matter where the Boston Braves wind up their sensational dash this year, carrying on the pennant fight where most of the other rivals of the New York Giants have fallen apart, William B. McKechnie can be put down for another long term contract as manager and a top-ranking spot in any list of big league pilots.

It is still something of a mystery to baseball men how Wilkinsburg Will escaped from the St. Louis Cardinal system after demonstrating to the satisfaction of one and all that he has rare talent as a handler of players and baseball tactician.

He won pennants with Pittsburgh, as well as with the Cardinals and their No. 1 farm club, Rochester. He had his troubles here and there, but there has never been any doubt about his sagacity or his ability to get the most out of what he had in hand. He couldn't stop the Yankees in 1928 but who could and who has, so far as the National League is concerned?

Shifting The Misfits

I still recollect sitting in the dugout with McKechnie and my old comrade in arms, Brian Bell, one balmy February day at St. Petersburg, three years ago. Will had just taken charge of a nondescript collection of ball players, whose outstanding note of color and ferocity was confined to the big Indian's head adorning the backs of their uniforms.

McKechnie had a pad full of names and a pencil. He was trying to figure out a lineup for exhibition games.

"Now if this outfielder can make a good catcher, this old shortstop can fill in at second base and I can find a few hitters and pitchers, we have a ball club," smiled Will. "Maybe I can dig up a batboy to play third, too."

Things went from bad to worse, however. The misfits still were misfits. Finally Judge Emil Fuchs, the club president, and McKechnie agreed something radical had to be done.

"I don't care what you do but make some changes," said Fuchs. "Put Rabbit Maranville back at short, if necessary. But do something."

Maranville went back to shortstop that afternoon and the Braves broke their losing streak against none other than Lefty Grove and the Athletics.

'Rabbit' The Sparkplug

Nearly 41, Maranville still is the spakplug of the Braves, now at second base, and one of the most remarkable veterans in the game. The fund of stories about him is unlimited. This isn't new but it's still good.

It seems the Rabbit's daughter was chatting one afternoon with her father at Braves Field.

"Dad, do you know what? I wish I was married and had a boy."

This somewhat startled the Rabbit, who demanded: "Why?"

"Just so I could bring him out to the game and say to him: 'Sonny, look at grand-dad out there playing a swell game at second base.'"

Connelly And P. N. A. Will Play

Sunday the Connelly A. C. will play its match with the Kingston P. N. A. nine at the Pan-Am diamond on the Saugerties road, instead of at St. Remy, Manager Spinneweber, of the Connelly club, said today, explaining that the St. Remy field is unfit for competition, water having settled on it from rain storms.

The battery for Connelly likely will be Scherer and Kozlowski, pitching and catching, respectively. The rest of the lineup will be the same as used in games all along this summer.

Traveling with the P. N. A. will be Phil Peters, Joe Nickolas and Nick Huber, pitchers; Tomaseski, catchers; Linden, first base; Didzik, second; Stumpf, third; Leskie, shortstop; Williams, left field, Van Buren or Scypca, center field, and Lewis, right field.

COLONIAL BOWLERS DID NOT ELECT OFFICERS

At its meeting last Thursday, the Colonial Bowling League did not elect officers as scheduled, deciding to put that important matter over for one week. Election will take place on Thursday evening, September 14, at Colonial alleys, North Front street. Representatives of 10 teams attended last week's business session. It is expected that six other teams will send spokesmen to next Thursday's meeting, making 16 teams contestants in the alley circuit.

Stupendous Task Confronts Coach Of Holy Cross 11

By BILL KING

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 9 (AP)—Unsettled with probable heavy storms reads the football forecast at Holy Cross, where Dr. Edward Anderson is picking up the threads of his interrupted coaching career.

This former Notre Dame end and later coach at De Paul University in Chicago faces a stupendous task. His plan to convert the crusaders from their three-year-old Warner system to the intricate Rockne offense cannot help but retard the early season progress of his veteran squad. He should be able to get over the first three opponents. Then comes the deluge, Harvard and Brown on the last two Saturdays in October.

Lots of Material

He is starting out with a generous quota of heavy linesmen who displayed great defensive skill for Captain J. J. McEwan last season. The friction, which resulted in McEwan's suspension on the eve of the objective game with Boston College, ruined what started out as the most promising team in Holy Cross' history.

Under normal conditions his line material would be superb. Between Captain Charlie Reiss and Ed Britt, the 200-pound ends, such tackles as the 225-pound "Buzz" Harvey and rugged Tom Kelly, could be inserted with such experienced guards as Jim Moran and Ray Blais flanking the reliable Tony Morandos in the center trio.

Positions Open

Anderson has 19 other forwards in his hand-picked squad and more will come whenever he lets down the bars.

Anderson has declared every position wide open and those that master his new methods first will get the varsity jobs.

The Holy Cross schedule:

September 30, St. Michaels; October 7, Catholic University; October 14, Providence College; October 21, Harvard at Cambridge; October 28, Brown; November 4, Detroit at Detroit; November 11, Manhattan at New York; November 18, Springfield; December 2, Boston College at Boston.

Warm Weather Hinders Army Team

West Point, N. Y., Sept. 9 — Because of the warm weather, Lt. "Gar" Davidson, head coach, has limited practice of the 1933 Army football team to quickening and conditioning exercises. The team did not appear in full football regalia until the end of the week, but practiced in shorts.

Enthusiasm among the players appears higher than in many years, which may be attributed to the fact that so many vacancies exist as a result of graduation last June. Davidson stated that "Jabbo" Jablonsky, team captain and right guard, and "Pete" Kopcsak, end, are the only players sure of regular berths at present.

The excellent showing of Simons, a triple threat back, who was a third string back last season, is most gratyfying to the coaches. Entering 4 games as a substitute last year, he completed 7 of the 10 forward passes he threw.

With Hutchinson, a 200 pound tackle, the only man on the tentative first team weighing over 190, "Fats" Ellinger, line coach, is concentrating on Walsh and Beall, heavy tackles from last year's B squad, in an effort to develop them into varsity material.

Lt. "Bill" Wood, kicking coach, who has great success last season, is again directing this group and has "Texas Jack" Buckler, last year's star punter, Nazarro, O'Neil, Sebastian and Grohs under his care.

Tagging Major League Bases

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr.

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Carl Hubbell's already famous ability to pitch his best when the going gets tough, once more had enthroned him as New York's baseball idol today and had virtually wiped out the pennant hopes of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Driven to cover and beaten in the first game of the important series between the Pirates and the league leading Giants, Hubbell came back yesterday to defeat the Bucs 2 to 1 in the fifth and final clash and send the Giants on to Cincinnati with a 6½ game lead.

The Pirates won three of the five games, but their failure to take the final clash left them with only faint pennant hopes and installed the Chicago Cubs as the next big threat to the Giants. While the Pirates lost, the Cubs beat the Boston Braves again, 8-3, and climbed into a virtual tie for second place. Next week the Giants have to tackle a six game series at Chicago.

The prospect looked bad for the Giants yesterday after the terrific drubbing they absorbed Thursday. But a couple of hits and an error by Pie Traynor gave them a one run lead in the third. With that margin to work on, Hubbell pitched five straight hitless innings. He ran into trouble in the eighth when singles by Tommy Thevenow and Earl Grace gave the Pirates their run and they went on to load the bases, but he pulled himself out of that difficulty and tore through to the finish, giving only six hits in all for his 21st victory. The deciding run came in the seventh when George Davis found young Hal Smith for a double, took third on Gus Mancuso's sacrifice and scored after Blondy Ryan hit a fly.

The Cubs gained their second place tie by battering Ben Cantwell, Leo Mangum and their successors for a dozen hits while Guy Bush pitched steadily. It was their fifth straight victory and their 47th in 62 home games so far.

The fourth place St. Louis Cardinals swept their series with the Phillies by winning 6 to 5 despite Chuck Klein's 27th homer. Silas Johnson, Cincinnati pitcher, finally found the victory he had been seeking since May 26, holding Brooklyn to six hits to win 12 to 0.

Washington's Senators avenged Thursday's defeat and maintained their 8½ game lead in the American League by walloping the Chicago White Sox 11 to 2 to give Al Crowder his 22nd mound victory. The New York Yankees kept pace by beating the St. Louis Browns 5 to 3 when Russ Van Atta, recently recovered from an attack of "flu" pitched four hit ball.

Jimmie Foxx's 42nd home run of the season and "Sugar" Cain's six hit flinging aided the Philadelphia Athletics to a 9-2 victory over the Cleveland Indians, their third straight. The Detroit Tigers took two decisions from the Boston Red Sox, each 4 to 3.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—Resumption of Saturday trading in the securities markets today failed to arouse even a faint glimmer of enthusiasm and stock transactions dropped to the lowest level of the year to date. Professionals passed a few equities back and forth on the exchange floor, but price fluctuations were unimportant and the close was fairly steady. Transfers approximated 250,000 shares.

Board rooms were almost deserted by customers. Brokers and their assistants generally sat around and talked about week-end fishing or golf. Little attention was paid to the limping ticker tape which, at frequent intervals, was silent for a minute or more. Grains and cotton furnished no stimulus to stocks as these staples presented a rather heavy appearance most of the morning. American currency again moved up in terms of leading European exchanges. Bonds were listlessly irregular.

Small gains were recorded by shares of Loew's, National Distillers, General Motors, American Commercial Alcohol, Chrysler, New York Central, Commercial Solvents, Owens-Illinois, American Telephone, Illinois Central and Case. Homestake Mining dropped 2½ points, and fractional declines were suffered by Allied Chemical, Alaska Juneau, United Aircraft, Goodyear, du Pont, Consolidated Gas, Sears Roebuck and American Tobacco B. Many issues were unchanged.

The satisfactory gain of some 34,000 in freight car loadings for the week ended September 2, was virtually ignored by the carrier stocks. The contra-seasonal increase was attributed largely to an advance in coal shipments and was about according to expectations. The decrease in unfilled orders of the U. S. Steel Corp. for August, announced at noon, which totaled 129,681 tons, was considerably less than had been estimated. In some quarters the decline had been placed at around 200,000 tons.

Skin of Rattlesnake Attracting Attention

The skin of a big rattlesnake, killed in the woods near the Henry Hoffman place south of Phoenicia, has attracted much attention in the display window of the House of Flowers on Fair street today. The snake measured five feet four inches in length and the skin is beautifully marked. There are nine rattles and a button.

The snake was discovered by Mr. Hoffman, who was cutting wood, when he heard its loud rattle and saw it coiled, ready to strike, about three feet away. He sent a lad to bring Ralph Davis, who lives some distance away. Davis came with his shotgun and blew the reptile's head off. According to Mr. Hoffman the snake never moved from its position, under some laurel bushes, from the time it was first discovered until its career was brought to an end. An autopsy disclosed the fact that the snake had recently made a meal of three good sized rats, which may account for its disinclination to move.

Grant DeSilva brought the skin to Kingston and turned it over to George Brooks, who placed it on display.
